Comment and Gossip On Sports of the Day

By HERBERT

UNLESS Michigan experienced an amazing metamorphosis following the crushing defeat by Syracuse on October 24, Harvard is facing a worrisome three weeks, with Princeton, Brown and Yale looming up. The Tigers will go to Cambridge next week, and in my opinion Harvard will have to play better football than was played Saturday if the record of not having been beaten in three seasons is to go unblemished. Michigan did experience a decided metamorphosis with Huggitt to drive the eleven and to do all the punting. Of that there is little doubt. But in spite of this and giving all credit to the Wolverines for having been below the standard of the Harvard attack with Mahan in the backfield and material strength will be added to the defense with Penneck, one of the best guards of all time, in the line, but again if these men are not in their best condition much of their value and effectiveness will be lost. In all probability the Harvard eleven will profit much by the game of Saturday. Lessons were learned that will be taken to heart, and it is quite likely that the team will be 20% stronger, if not more, against Princeton than it was against Michigan.

WHAT impressed me most on Saturday was the fact that Harvard carried a scoring attack against a defense by Michigan which looked quite as strong as any I have seen this year. There was a quick awakening, too, in the fourth quarter, which indicated clearly that the men were playing with something in reserve and were never perhaps fully extended, except in two short stretches. Added to this, the tightening of the defense when sorely pushed aroused a feeling of confidence, although it must be admitted that the strength of this defense lay more with the secondary line than with the forwards. Logan, at quarterback, used reasonably good judgment, but he did not strike me as so forceful a player as when the attack was built up around Brickley and with the encouragement of the latter's personality itself. Of the new men, Francke made a decidedly good impression, and Yale and Princeton will do well to watch him closely.

PRINCETON caught a tartar in Williams, as was suggested in The Tribune last week. But, unfortunately, one cannot be in two places at once, and I missed what appears to have been one of the best games of the season. Williams, the former Yale captain, has been getting results at Williamstown for two or three years, and it looks now as if his eleven would rank near the top when the season is over. The paths of the so-called Big Eleventh this year have been rough and stony.

PRINCETON and Harvard are now face to face, or will be on Saturday at Cambridge. The coaches have three or four days in which to apply the polishing brush and put on the finishing touches. It is quite possible that the lessons of the games on Saturday will bring about corrective measures here and there, but in the main the teams must stand or fall on such strength as they were able to show in their last game. Needless to say, a great struggle is in prospect, with the chances not so much in favor of Harvard as indicated early in the season.

May Be a Case of Foxing.

THE Tigers showed little or nothing in the way of a cohesive or varied offense against Dartmouth, but I find myself now in the unenviable position of not knowing whether to place most weight on what was seen or what is heard. According to a man whose judgment must be respected, Princeton is not lacking in weapons of offense, and reports of the forward practice bear out the statement that the open game in the way of forlorn passes, lateral passes, sweeping end runs and on-side kicks has been carefully and systematically developed. It is true that the errors of Dartmouth in the second period made it possible for Princeton to score to points, which were enough of a bulwark to put the Tigers in the happy position of being able to cover up much that the scouts from other colleges were anxious to see. Then, too, Dartmouth's determined uphill fight in the second half kept the Tigers on the defensive a large part of the time, so that opportunity was lacking to cut loose with the best they had, even if so willed. Under the circumstances, then, one feels disposed to put quite as much, if not more, credence in what one hears as in what one saw, and to believe that offensive weapons will not be lacking against Harvard on Saturday.

DEFENSIVELY, the Tigers have no grounds for uneasiness. The work in the secondary line against Dartmouth was above the average, and while the forwards seemed slow in charging and put altogether too much burden on the backs, this fault is easy of correction, and Eddie Hart, with his inspiring drive, is just the man to effect a cure for such ills as were exposed. Later in the week this angle as it applies to the Harvard game will be taken up in more detail.

THE meeting of Princeton and Harvard is not the only one on Saturday of high promise for a keen and exciting struggle. It is the one of most gripping interest, but some enlightenment is sure to come from the meeting of Yale and Brown, at New Haven; Pennsylvania and Michigan, at Ann Arbor; Franklin and Marshall and Cornell, at Ithaca; Notre Dame and the Army, at West Point; Fordham and the Navy, at Annapolis; Dartmouth and Tufts, at Hanover; Rutgers and Syracuse, at Syracuse; Lehigh and Pennsylvania State, at North Bethlehem; Pittsburgh and Washington and Jefferson, at Pittsburgh; New York University and Union, at Schenectady, and Williams and Wesleyan, at Williamstown.

BROWN did not show enough against Cornell at the Polo Grounds on October 24 to threaten much danger at New Haven, but two weeks is ample time for improvement and Brown has a way of coming through for Yale off and on. It may be just the kind of a game that Princeton team will need to put it on edge for the meeting with Princeton the following Saturday. Michigan is likely to beat Pennsylvania, as the Quakers have been playing in a particularly impressive way this year, while Cornell is counted on to defeat Franklin and Marshall, in spite of the fact that the latter carried the decision over Pennsylvania on October 3 by a score of 10 to 0. Notre Dame will have to improve over the Yale game, as no doubt it has, to repeat its victory over the Army of a year ago. There will be a great little battle up on the plains and the test is just what the cadets want in their building for the Navy game on November 28.

No Child's Play, This.

OF all the games, however, which I would rather see, apart from the Harvard-Princeton engagement at Cambridge, is the one between Rutgers and Syracuse at Syracuse. It will be no child's play. George Foster Sanford has developed a real team at Rutgers—a team that would be a worthy opponent for any eleven in the land. Syracuse, the conqueror of Michigan, also boasts of one of the best teams ever put on the gridiron up the state. Buck O'Neill has made the most of his material and is aiming to command a higher rating this year than Dartmouth, with which a game is scheduled in Boston on November 21. Rutgers then has much to gain in beating Syracuse, and on a line through Princeton the two elevens are not far apart. In the opening game of the season the Tigers beat Rutgers by a score of 12 to 0, two weeks later they had their work cut out to beat Syracuse by a score of 12 to 7.

THE football season is all too short. The schedule is so arranged that it is impossible to see as many teams in action as is necessary to get fully acquainted with their merits, individually and collectively, for the purpose of a proper ranking when the fun is over and for the purpose of building that mythical all-star team which has come to be quite a part of every football season. In order, then, to get better acquainted with at least three teams—Williams, Amherst and Brown—which have unquestioned merit and which I will not be able to see in actual games, it is my purpose to visit them on their own grounds, where at least a little practice can be seen. Barring accident, Williams will be the objective point on Thursday, Amherst on Friday, Cambridge, of course, on Saturday, for the Harvard-Princeton game, and Providence on the following Monday.

WALTER CAMP puts the increased attendance at the football games in New Haven this year—an increase, by the way, of between 30% and 40%—to the added interest aroused by the more open style of play. This opinion unquestionably is correct. The attendance would be increased another 20% if the plan of numbering the players was uniformly adopted.

MANHASSET GUNNERS OUT. Hoyt Carries Off Honors in First Match of Season. The trapshooting season for youngsters on the north shore for last Monday ended yesterday at the Manhasset Bay Yacht Club, Port Washington, with a series of five matches, in which six of the members took part.

WHEN A FELLER NEEDS A FRIEND

WILLIAMS SHOCKED PRINCETON MEN

Undergraduates Severely Criticize Work of Tiger Football Team.

(By Telegram to The Tribune.) Princeton, N. J., Nov. 1.—Severe criticisms of the Princeton football team were made to-day by the undergraduates who watched the battle with Williams on Saturday. The one point of agreement in everybody's tale of woe was the abominable open field tackling of the Princeton players. Toolan and Tomkins, the Williams backs, were rarely seriously bothered by the Princeton ends, Lambertson and Brown repeatedly hitting them only to side off. Ballin's efforts to be at all points of the line at the same time made it seem to some that even he was guilty of falling into traps more than one occasion, but if each man had played as well as he there would have been no occasion for a post-mortem. Shenk fought a hard fight for a man in poor physical condition, but gains through his part of the line were more frequent than usual. Shenk may have been at fault occasionally, but there was an unusual lack of help from his neighbor on the line. Love felt a victim to bad tackling, as so many of the other Princeton men did. Williams took the ball used in the game home as a present from Captain Ballin. It is said that the game is the first football game between Princeton and Williams.

Princeton gained two yards by rushing to Williams's one. Briggs held his own with Eells and Toolan in punting, and forward passes netted about the same distance for each team, although one scored for Williams and Princeton's gain was wasted. Princeton came within ordinary scoring distance no less than five times, as much as the Tigers when a touchdown resulted, and Williams was dangerous only at the time of her score.

Harvard Badly Battered. (By Telegram to The Tribune.) Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 1.—The Harvard football team came through its game with Michigan in good condition, but the players were badly battered. In fact, so much so that none of the men engaged against the Wolverines will play any football until Tuesday. Wallace, the center, was hurt on the head, but not seriously. Smith, the end, who had just come back into the game, injured his leg again, and Trumbull was pretty much used up.

Marquard Still Barnstorming. Rube Marquard bested Jimmy Ring of the Yankees, in an interesting pitchers' battle at Dexter Park yesterday afternoon, and a team partly made up of the Giants triumphed over the Cypress Hills nine by a score of 2 to 1. Larry McLean was on the receiving end for Marquard, while Otto Miller, of the Superbas, handled the delivery for Ring.

Lloyd's Harbor Yacht Race. Four members of the Lloyd's Harbor Yacht Club sailed in a race from New Rochelle for Lloyd's Harbor at 1 p.m. on Saturday. The starters and the order of their arrival were: M. Katten-Guardia, A. D. Seymour's Alwin and Draper's Playmate. After the race a meeting was held and the nominating committee for 1915 was elected. The yacht club will race back to New Rochelle to-morrow. The club has forty members and Commodore Charles A. Marsland is known as the "Chief Hounder."

Welsh to Defend His Title in Ring To-Night

Big Crowd Expected to See Wolgast Battle for Lightweight Crown at the Garden.

Frederick Hall Thomas, of Pontypridd, Wales, known to the boxing world as Freddie Welsh, the lightweight champion of the world, will defend his title against the rushes of Ad Wolgast, of Cadillac, Mich., the former champion, at Madison Square Garden in a ten-round bout to-night. To those who have not secured their tickets to advance the well known adage may be called to mind: "Come early and avoid the crush." In all probability there will be a record crowd on hand. Jimmy Johnston said again last night that most of the better seats had been taken. A fast host is promised, but critics agree that Welsh should win without much trouble. The Briton is by far the more scientific boxer of the pair, and combining with his skill the ability to fight at close quarters. Furthermore, he is at the zenith of his career, while Wolgast is making one more desperate effort to come back.

Welsh in this city since he won the championship from Willie Ritchie. Naturally, the enthusiasts are eager to renew acquaintances with the man who whipped the doughty little San Francisco lad, Welsh, although the first Englishman to hold the world's lightweight championship since the days of Dick Burge, is one of the most popular men in the ring. His friends are equally fond of him. This much is myriads, won as much through his personality and admirable characteristics out of the ring as by his ability as a fighter.

Wolgast, the snarling wolf of the ring, has heard the recall sounded. Like many another, he has disregarded it, believing that he had "just one more fight left." Defeats by Joe Mandot, Tommy Gary and Johnny Tillman have failed to reduce his bump of self-esteem in the least. This much is ready to fight to the last gasp, and if defeated will have not the slightest cause for complaint. He has trained well, but for a man about to face one of the shiftest boxers in the ring he has neglected his boxing. Seldom, indeed, has he donned the gloves in the gymnasium, and this will undoubtedly count against him when the going gets tough.

There is little probability that either man will win by a knockout. Wolgast, always a "mauling" fighter, was never so much in the line of late he has apparently lost his punch, and, furthermore, lacks the skill to corner a man of Welsh's calibre. The Briton is a light, tapping fighter, who depends on his speed, so ten rounds of fast work will most likely be seen, with Welsh winning on points.

In the semi-final contest Eddie Morgan, of England, will face Eddie Wallace, of Brooklyn. Lloyd's Harbor Yacht Race. Four members of the Lloyd's Harbor Yacht Club sailed in a race from New Rochelle for Lloyd's Harbor at 1 p.m. on Saturday. The starters and the order of their arrival were: M. Katten-Guardia, A. D. Seymour's Alwin and Draper's Playmate. After the race a meeting was held and the nominating committee for 1915 was elected. The yacht club will race back to New Rochelle to-morrow. ## STRAUS WINS AND LOSES

Drives Fair Maiden to Victory. Startle Beats McKinney.

Nathan Straus won a match race and lost one at the regular Sunday matinee of the Road Drivers' Association, of New York, held on Harlem Speedway yesterday afternoon. More than six thousand persons were present and enjoyed the sport immensely. Close finishes and spirited competition marked the races in the Class A and match events. For the first time this fall meeting, Mr. Straus was seen in a sulky. He handled the reins over his bay mare, Fair Maiden, against H. S. Crossman's chestnut gelding, Vermont Belini. Fair Maiden won the race in straight heats. Many of the spectators near and about the finishing point thought that Straus's gelding, H. O. McKinney, with Startle, a bay gelding owned by E. Shoenberger, the only other starter, but the judges decided that it was a dead heat. Each horse had won a heat, so they had to go another. The Straus gelding showed the way up to the last eighth, but then he and Startle were full of fight and spirited desperately, and went under the wire victor by two lengths.

COLUMBIA CALLS WINTER ATHLETES

Candidates for Hockey and Basketball Teams Report This Week.

Winter athletics will get under way at Columbia this week, when the first of the candidates for the various hockey players. Incidentally the wrestling, fencing and water polo squads will be put through a series of elimination tournaments, the results of which will determine the make-up of the respective teams. Although Columbia does not open its "varsity" basketball season until December 4, when it faces the recently organized Rutgers five, Harry Fisher will begin work with the squad to-morrow. The freshmen will be called to the front first, and after Fisher has weeded out promising players of possible varsity calibre the youngsters will be assigned to an assistant coach and the "varsity" squad will be asked to report.

Columbia may find its basketball season seriously affected by the fire which recently swept the gymnasium building. Although the gymnasium itself did not suffer from fire, tons of water covered the floor for several days, with the result that it is badly warped and sprung. Workmen have endeavored to smooth it off, and it is believed that it is now in fair condition. The schedule of the Columbia five will be limited as in the last few years. There will be five preliminary contests with Rutgers, New York University, Brooklyn Polytechnic, St. Lawrence and the alumni. The only other games that the rink would be built on South Field, but with the newly acquired land available it is now understood that the rink will be built there. The rink will be enclosed, but it will not contain a freezing plant.

'CRSS-COUNTRY COURSE MARKS GO

Competition Keen in the Many Weekly Invitation Runs.

ENTRANTS FOR SENIOR TITLE HAVE TRY-OUT

Barden Leads Field Over New Trail in Good Time—Schaffer a Winner.

Several course records were made by the "cross-country" runners that competed in the many invitation runs held throughout the city yesterday. The ideal weather was responsible for the large packs of runners turned out.

Lawson Robertson, coach of the Irish-American A. C., sent his prospective starters in the senior metropolitan championship run over the official six and a quarter miles in Prospect Park, Brooklyn.

Tom Barden, a one time junior national champion, led the field home in the good time of 26:31. Arthur J. Fogel finished twenty yards behind, with Pat Flynn, the erstwhile Irish champion, right on his heels. The order to finish in order was J. J. McNamara, Frank Zann, William Fogel, John J. Donnelly, William Rozette, Tom Lawson and Patrick Keating.

Hannes Kolehmainen and Vailar Kyronen, the two Finnish runners, walked over the course to familiarize themselves with the trail.

Casper Schaffer, of the Long Island Athletic Club, who had his record for the three-and-a-half-mile course of the Atlas Athletic Club, of Brooklyn, broken by James W. Plant, a clubmate, last Sunday, set up new figures for the distance yesterday. His time of 10:13 was two seconds faster than the time of Plant.

For a mile and a half, Schaffer found willing pacemakers in Harry McLaughlin, William Bantfield and Bert Conner, three Knights of St. Anthony runners. However, at the two-mile point Schaffer decided to quicken his pace, and soon moved away. The three others finished as named.

The summary follows:

MAY END BASEBALL WAR

Herrmann Has Plan to Absorb Fed League, Is Report.

Chicago, Nov. 1.—August Herrmann, chairman of the National Commission, left here to-night for Cincinnati, and is said to have taken with him a plan for the amalgamation into organized baseball of the Federal League. This afternoon he had a telephonic conversation with Charles Weeghman, president of the Chicago Federals, and later conferred with B. B. Johnson, president of the American League.

Except to admit that preliminary negotiations for ending the baseball war were discussed, Mr. Herrmann would say little. "Before the subject of peace was broached in New York we all swore ourselves to secrecy regarding the negotiations," said Herrmann. "It was agreed that, publicly, probably would work our plans, and we will say nothing until we have reached a decision."

ST. GEORGE IN SOCCER TIE

Rocky Field Hampers Players on Both Sides.

Playing on a rocky field at Mount Vernon yesterday afternoon, the St. George Field Club and the Mount Vernon eleven battled ninety minutes to a drawn game of 1 goal each.

Players of both teams were at a disadvantage over the rough turf, and falls were frequent and cut knees were many. Olsen, goalkeeper for St. George Field Club, tallied the point for his team by converting a "penalty," while Jones, aided by some nice passing on the left wing, evaded up matters for the home squad.
